Founder of Boys Alive! Janet Alison is coming to help teachers and parents alike understand the challenges facing active children in a classroom. Filled with understanding, knowledge, and experience, she will be sharing helpful information and tricks she has gained through her research and practice on how to work WITH your active child instead of against them.

She will also be having a Q&A session, so you can ask her specific questions.

From the website: www.boysalive.com

“It was unequivocally NOT the boys.

The problem was larger than me, and larger than their parents and other teachers, combined. These boys were bumping up against a school culture which required and rewarded behavior that was simply not aligned with how they preferred to learn. They needed to move. They needed to be outside. They needed more active assignments and different ways of participating in class and interacting with their fellow students.”
